Before the early voting October 5 - 13th and main vote October 25th, hopefully everyone in Toronto has a chance to review all their options this election year. That means passing on websites, ideas and more to make sure we all know them. There's something here for everybody, so pass it on! :-)

Since millions of people worldwide understand and discuss the big picture, mostly on the internet, nearly everyone in Toronto should be able to. Some good people in Toronto have been working on these issues for years, so they know what's happening, so we all have a good reason to share it.

Before, it was a lot harder to tell people what was going on. Many of us knew we were being lied to but didn't want to hear about it. Today, with the weak economy and daily admissions of corruption that threatens our future, we're more open to learning about it than ever. If we do, we can act on it.

Since this is an election year, please remind people about this political campaign dealing with real issues that affect us all. Since we can understand of the source of our problems, we can also work on solutions to use at City Hall. We can use the truth to work with our City so they work for us.

Below is a selection of flyers updated regularly for the campaign. They're historically the quickest and easiest way to share info. We don't have to have any conversations we're not used to, we can simply print and cut up some flyers to pass on. Once we do this more often, we'll figure it all out.

This has been done for centuries and I recently did it before, during and after the G20 Summit in June, which appeared to have a positive impact. All of these posters and flyers are public domain in MS PowerPoint and can be modified for use by anyone for anything else later. They can be downloaded by clicking "HTTP" in the top left-hand corner of the above page. They deal with the 2010 Toronto elections and related issues so we're more informed and make better choices.

They can be used for printing (use "Fit To Page") and sharing with family, friends, neighbours and others as people see fit so we can figure out different topics. The text and pictures can be changed often, that way people can react quickly to new issues and provide others around them with access to different info at different times. It's historically normal to warn your neighbours about what's really happening. While it's not in style, we can't wait for big corporations to promote it.

Since we're in a global recession, they're a very inexpensive tool for us to use. They come in 4 per page versions, plus many others below. Here in Toronto, they can be printed for as little as 3-cents per one-side of black and white page, then cut-up at Kinko's for $1 per cut. For example, with the 4 per page versions, you can make around 2000 for $20 to share anonymously or publicly, leave places, etc. During an election period, most people won't mind taking or displaying them.

While many people are learning a lot, making sure that we also use our knowledge practically to affect our political system in calm, peaceful and public ways may help others find the means and courage to discuss the same serious issues that are affecting them too. In this 2010 Toronto municipal election year, as long as people aren't afraid to take a piece of paper from someone else, this can work to get the word out fast. There are many ways to do it, but this one's a classic.
